MARYLAND GAZETTE,

Containing the freſheſt Advices, Foreign and Domeſtic.

TUESDAY, June 9. 1747.

MADRID, March 2, O. S.

HER eldeſt ſon of the Pretender arrived here the 20th ult. attended by one Iriſh officer; the next day he applied to the miniſters for leave to viſit the king, to which he received no anſwer 'til the evening of the 23d. when by a meſſage ſent to his inn, he was made acquainted, that his majeſty could not ſee him for fear of giving offence to the court of Great-Britain, and even wiſh'd that he would quit the kingdom to avoid giving of any umbrage. In conſequence of this meſſage, the ſaid gentleman ſet out the 24th ult. at 5 in the morning, taking the road to Guadalaxara, accompanied by Don Thomas Fitzgerald, conſeller of the Indies, and by birth an Iriſhman. As yet the rout they purſued afterwards is not known; tho' the general opinion is, that he will return to the place from whence he came, and from thence to Rome.

Genoa, March 13, O. S. Our laſt advices from Provence bring, that five Engliſh arm'd veſſels having approached the city of Cannes, had furiouſly cannonaded and bombarded it; but that the batteries which were after ſome time raiſed on the coaſt, obliged the Engliſh at length to draw off. The city has nevertheleſs ſuffer'd terribly by this affair, being almoſt reduced to a heap of rubbiſh; the Engliſh having, 'tis computed, thrown near 500 bombs into it.

Nice, March 21, N. S. An officer ſent by admiral Medley to baron de Launay, commandant of the fort of Villa Franca, has brought the news, that yeſterday the Engliſh took off Monaco, 15 veſſels with troops on board, bound from Toulon to Genoa. Two others had eſcaped into the harbour of Monaco; and it was ſuppoſed that the reſt, who were entirely diſperſed, would endeavour to get back to ſome port in France. An Engliſh captain arrived in this town ſince, from on board the ſquadron, gives the ſame account as an eye-witneſs; and adds, that by the poſitions of the ſquadron, they ſhould give a good account of the reſt. By this officer's report, the whole convoy amounted to between 30 and 40 veſſels of all ſizes.

Hague, April 4, N. S. By yeſterday's letters from Bruſſels, marſhal Saxe arrived there the day before, and daily expected count Lowendahl thither, to concert with him about their operations. The French heavy artillery was getting ready with all ſpeed, and they were forming 30 ſieges at Louvain.

Turin, March 11, O. S. This morning an expreſs arrived here from general Schulembourg, with an account, that having received all his artillery from Savona and Tortona, he let forward with his army for Genoa; that he had forced all the poſts on the road, which were poſſeſſed by the Genoeſe peaſants, and had reached the ſummits of the hills which command the city; and was actually erecting his batteries againſt it when this expreſs came away.

The particulars of admiral Medley's falling in with, and taking and diſperſing the tranſports from the ports of France to Genoa, arrived here yeſterday by expreſs from the ſaid admiral to the Britiſh miniſter, but they are not as yet made public; all we can at preſent learn is, that 15 veſſels were taken with about 900 ſoldiers on board, ſeveral drove into Monaco, Antibes, &c. and that not quite 400 men, out of the 6000, had reached Genoa: That there were above 30 veſſels in the whole, convoyed by only one man of war and a frigate, but that the man of war had been diſabled from proceeding on her voyage by loſing one of her maſts; and that the frigate made her eſcape from the Britiſh ſhips in ſhallow water.

Hague, March 31, O. S. We learn from Bruſſels, that all the French army was in motion, and that all their heavy artillery for a ſiege was embarking on the canal of that place; and as all the families in Maeſtricht had received orders to provide themſelves with proviſions for ſome weeks, it was imagined the French were preparing to beſiege that place: In the mean time marſhal Saxe has ſent an expreſs to his court, to acquaint the king his maſter of the duke's arrival at Tilbourg, and of the Allied army's being every where in motion; and promiſes the king his army ſhall be compleatly formed by the 4th of April, N. S. at fartheſt.

Tilbourg, April 1, N. S. His royal highneſs the duke of Cumberland is arrived here; and marſhal Bathiani and prince Waldeck, with the other general officers, are expected this evening, in order to aſſiſt at the laſt council of war, which is to be held here tomorrow; and the next morning every one is to take the field: In the mean time all the troops are every where in motion, and the Allied army is aſſembling in three different bodies; that is to ſay, the Imperialiſts on the ſide of Maeſtricht and Liege; thoſe of England, Hanover, and Heſſe, on the ſide of Bois-le-duc; and thoſe of the Republic near Breda. The Heſſians joined the grand army yeſterday.

Conſtantinople, Feb. 21. The Kan of the Crimea Tartars ſet out from hence the 29th of laſt month, in order to return to his own dominions. This prince appeared thoroughly ſatisfied with the reception he had met with at court; his preſence occaſion'd no change in the miniſtry, nor in the meaſures of the Porte. Every thing remains in the ſame ſituation, and the grand ſignior perſiſts in the deſign of keeping up a perfect intelligence with the Chriſtian powers, notwithſtanding every thing that has been publiſhed upon this ſubject to the contrary.

Rome, March 14, O. S. Cardinal Aquaviva died here laſt Monday night, after a very tedious indiſpoſition. Cardinal Pizzo died the ſame night; and Cardinal Accoramboni the next Day.

Genoa, March 14, O. S. The Flora, a French man of war, came into the port the 9th of this month, from Toulon, having on board M. de Maurice, commander in chief of the French troops, ſeveral officers, and 50 grenadiers, and a like number of bombardiers: They had been chaſed ſeveral hours the day before by an Engliſh man of war of 60 guns. The next day but one three tartans; on board of which was the royal Italian regiment, arriv'd in the harbour of this city; the crews report, that after they had ſailed from Toulon, the convoy which had ſet out from Marſeilles, to the number of 100 veſſels, had returned into that port, to repair the damage which a ſhip that eſcorted them had received by a ſtorm of wind.

On the 10th we receiv'd advice, that 13 tartans of the convoy from Marſeilles were arrived at Portofino, and 4 others at Sestri de Levante. The troops which were on board them, the next day landed, and on the 12th they arrived at St. Pierre d'Arena, to the number of 3000. The ſame day arrived an expreſs from Spezzia with advice, that about 60 ſail, part likewiſe of the convoy from Marſeilles, was entered ſafe into the gulf of that name, tho' they had been chaſed for two days by four Engliſh men of war. The troops brought in theſe ſhips are alſo to land there, and to march to the neighbourhood of this city, where quarters are prepar'd for them.

Companies of volunteers are ſtill raiſing here. The Burghers who are all in arms, are divided into ſeveral companies or regiments, having experienced officers at their head. There are beſides theſe ſome thouſands of men, upon the footing of regular troops; and 'tis reckon'd that theſe troops, join'd to the Burghers and to the inhabitants of the valleys of Polcevera and Biſagno, will amount to about 40,000 men.

The

The arm'd gallies which lately sail'd from this port, have taken four ships going from Vera France to Leghorn, laden with arms, &c. belonging to the Austrian troops. A great quantity of snow has lately fallen in the neighbouring mountains, so that nothing remarkable has pass'd on the hills of Pollevera, Masone, and Voltri.

LONDON.

March 7. They write from Plymouth, that the Grand Turk and Amazon Men of War have taken the Wolf privateer, belonging to the French; formerly an English sloop of War.

March 14. The Sultana, a French privateer, of 24 guns and 174 men, belonging to St. Malo's, having met with bad weather, sprung a leak, and was obliged to throw overboard all her guns except two; the crew, in order to save their lives, run her into Balumpre, and surrender'd themselves prisoners.

Portsmouth, March 29. This morning sailed out of harbour to Spithead the Defiance, capt. Granville. The Lion and Princess Louisa will be ready to follow in three or four days. All the transports from Ireland remain.

London, March 31. The Antelope, Townshend, from Jamaica, is arrived at Briſtol; who informs us, that 12 days ago he was taken off Cape Clear by the Gloria privateer, of St. Malo's, capt. Bennett, who obliged him, on pain of death, to ransom his ship, which he did for 1600*l.*

April 2. By our last accounts from Berlin, military preparations are still carried on in Prussia, whither his majesty propos'd to go in May, and to form a camp near Mensel, of upwards of 30,000 men.

Some advices from Ratisbon say, that a very considerable body of Saxon troops have received orders to march towards the frontiers of Bohemia, but with what view the most penetrating politicians there could not determine.

Some private letters from the Hague say, that a report prevails there, that a peace either is or will be concluded, between the courts of Madrid and London; as also between the former and the court of Vienna.

April 4. They write from Paris, that a manifesto is actually in the press there, setting forth the reasons which have induced the French king to enter the territories of a certain power, in order to find out his enemies, who have retired thither. It is to be hoped, that that power, the States General, will give an actual answer to this piece.

Lord Ogilvy, who made his escape into Norway after the battle of Culloden, and is since got into France, has obtained a colonel's commission of the French king. His lady, who was prisoner in Scotland, is also landed at Boulogne.

There is advice from Holland, that his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland, was arrived at the head of his army, and that they had already taken the field, and were all in high spirits.

Ilfracombe, April 1. Yesterday put into this place the John and Thomas, from Waterford for Briſtol, William Jeffreys master; who says, that on Sunday last, early in the morning, he saw a large fleet of ships, about 20 leagues to the Northward of him, in St. George's channel, still shaping their course Northward: By his best computation he makes them about 40 sail, about 20 he takes to be ships of war, and the rest transports; and by their course, he believes them to be bound for Ireland, or some part of Scotland.

April 7. The following ships are ordered to be got ready for admiral Anson and admiral Warren; viz. the Monmouth, Prince Frederick, Hampton Court, Namur, Edinburgh, Yarmouth, and Kent, third rates; the Princess Louisa, Portland, Eagle, Lion, Northampton, Centurion, Salisbury, Faulkland, Portland's Prize, and Gloucester, fourth rates; the Ambuscade and Hector, fifth rates; the Inverness, Shoreham, Syren, Falcon sloop, and Viper, sixth rates; the Vulcan and Pluto, fireships.

Briſtol, April 6. Last night arrived the Sheerness privateer, from a cruize, very leaky. A sailor belonging to the Blandford privateer is come to town, who gives an account, that she had taken a French privateer of 20 guns and 300 men, after an engagement of five hours, in which they killed and wounded 50 of the French, with the loss only of 3 or 4. They were convoying her to Kinsale, when they met a French privateer of 30 guns, who bore down on the Blandford, and exchanged a few shot; but finding another French ship coming towards them, the Blandford gave away, and the privateer was retaken; who having afterwards met a Dutch ship, put the sailor and passengers on board her, who landed in the Weſt, and came hither this evening.

Gosport, April 8. A court martial was held on board the Duke man of war in the harbour, on Thursday last, on the captains of the Woolwich and Severn men of war; and they were both honourably acquitted, it appearing to the court they had both behaved as able and experienced officers.

Portsmouth, April 7. This morning arrived at this port his majesty's ship Mardione, from Lisbon. And this morning sailed from Spithead admiral Anson, in the St. George, and admiral Warren in the Devonshire, with the following ships; viz. the Defiance, Lyon, Princess Louisa, Kent, Pembroke, Dover, Chester, Briſtol, Shoreham, and Terror bomb.

London, April 9. Yesterday came an account by a cartel ship, arrived from St. Malo's, that the Eagle West India packet, from Jamaica, having on board about 30,000*l.* Sterling, as the French say, in specie, was taken by a French privateer, and carried into that place. There is also an account by this ship, that all the privateers were out from St. Malo's, except two small ones, which were almost ready to sail when she came away: But here 'tis said there is but 16000*l.*

By letters from Milan there is advice, that a very sharp action has happened between a large body of Austrians, and auxiliars of Genoese; which turned out to the disadvantage of the latter, who lost a great many men upon the spot, and had 600 taken prisoners.

Yesterday there was a great concourse of people at Mr. Stevenson's, an undertaker in the Strand, to see the coffin of Lord Lovat, which is made of an uncommon width, and cover'd with black cloth, with brass nails, coronet, &c. on the lid of which is the following inscription; Simon Dominus Fraser de Lovat, decollat. April 9, 1747. Ætat. suæ 80.

This day being appointed for the execution of Lord Lovat, about 9 o'clock two troops of life-guards, and one troop of horse grenadiers, and a battalion of foot guards, march'd to Tower-Hill; and about 11 the sheriffs went to the Tower and demanded the prisoner, who was delivered to them, and carried in a mourning coach to a house near the scaffold, where he continued half an hour; and was then brought by two warders to the scaffold, where he look'd about him, talk'd chearfully, view'd his coffin, and then trying the block, put on a white cap, pulled off his coat and waistcoat, then kneel'd down, and immediately gave a signal to the executioner, who took off his head at one blow; after which the body and head were put into his coffin, and carried back to the Tower.

A scaffold near Barking alley, Tower Hill, fell down, on which were about 400 persons; by which accident six or seven persons were kill'd on the spot, and a great number had their legs, arms, &c. broke.
